INPsySR is a network of organizations that use psychology to attempt to understand and improve pressing social issues. Our purpose in linking such groups is

- To unite the efforts of organizations around the world in which use psychology to understand and promote peace, conflict resolution and social justice activities.
- To promote communication and cooperation between psychologists, related professions and their organizations in the area of social responsibility.
- To support member organizations in developing their work in their own countries.
- To facilitate contacts with international bodies of psychology and related disciplines and to be an important source of advice to institutions, government departments and to political and social organizations.
- To promote social responsibility in the practice of psychology.

Our network aims to be world wide, to include small and large organizations. There are no fees for joining the network, but each organization will be responsible for raising its own funds for any expenses it incurs as part of its participation. Expenses for maintaining the Website will be shared.

If you represent an organization focused on peace, justice, human rights and pressing social issues please consider joining us by completing the application and returning it to: Membership Secretary Jancis Long: jancislong2004@yahoo.com or 3105 38th Street NW, Washington DC 20016, USA

[Note: Only organizations may join INPsySR. Individuals, however, may join the US based Psychologists for Social Responsibility as international members. . . Please find details at www.psysr.org.]
